

Dr Kenneth Msiska - heads the Plant Quarantine and Phytosanitary Service which is a part of Zambia's National Plant Protection Organization. His main area of work has been in biosecurity (phytosanitary) with over 15 years of experience. He has been involved in capacity building of the NPPO and market access negotiations for plant and plant products of Zambian origin. Dr Msiska brings with him experience in implementation of various capacity building projects in Zambia. He holds a PhD in plant biosecurity from Lincoln University, Christchurch, New Zealand.